20a. How does the Committee accomplish its purpose?

The ACIEP meets to discuss international economic issues of current importance to the United States. The State Department and the Charter of the Committee determine the agenda for each meeting. Invited speakers from government and American private-sector organizations and institutions participate in the discussions, with opportunity provided for other members of the public to comment. Subcommittees have played an important role in providing advice to the parent Committee by researching specific topics and reporting findings to the parent Committee. The Committee has made a significant contribution to developing and implementing U.S. international economic policy goals and objectives. Please see below for additional information.

20b. How does the Committee balance its membership?

Membership consists of a balanced representation of persons from a broad spectrum of U.S. organizations and institutions. Members are from the corporate, academic, financial, legal, labor, technology, consumer, consultancy, and regional interest communities. The State Department takes proactive steps to maintain and recruit a full, balanced membership.

20c. How frequent and relevant are the Committee Meetings?

In 2018, the committee met three times. The Bureau of Economic and Affairs values the continuation of the committee, and the committee is expected to meet four times in 2019. In FY2017 the committee met only once due to the transition in administration and the desire by the Acting Assistant Secretary for Economic and Business Affairs to ensure the President's new senior international economic team was in place in order to maximize ACIEP member input and time. Full committee meetings were held on four occasions during FY2016. Discussions are wide-ranging and open to the public. The Committee meets to discuss timely and relevant issues, such as key initiatives and economic priorities, such as (1) trade, (2) sanctions (3) economic engagement in China, and (4) women's economic empowerment. The Committee provides a valuable channel for consultation between the private sector, labor groups, civil society, and the U.S. government on U.S. international economic policy issues. Subcommittees focus on specific topics. Subcommittees met in FY2018 In FY 2016, subcommittees focused on a wide range of issues including but not limited to: sanctions policy; increasing the effectiveness and confidentiality procedures of the U.S. National Contact Point for Responsible Business Conduct.

20d. Why can't the advice or information this committee provides be obtained elsewhere?

The Committee offers the Department a wealth of diverse viewpoints, expertise, knowledge, and insight not available solely within the State Department or elsewhere in the government on major issues related to the development of and execution of international economic policy. The Committee provides information and advice on the effective integration of economic interests into U.S. foreign policy and on the Department's role in using foreign policy as economic policy to advance American commercial interests in a competitive global economy. The Committee has played a significant role in the Department's efforts to promote outreach to industry, services, labor, non-government organizations, and academia, and in focusing on special topics of concern for U.S. foreign economic policy, including advancing women's economic empowerment, input on the Administration's trade and sanctions positions, the Indo-Pacific strategy, national security investment, and more.

20e. Why is it necessary to close and/or partially closed committee meetings?

N/A

21. Remarks

The Bureau of Economic and Business Affairs strongly values this committee and the input it proves and intends to host four meetings in 2019.
